Donovan Bares Cuba Prisoner Bilk

Swindlers in Florida are representing themselves as agents of James B. Donovan, the New York lawyer who arranged the Cuban prisoner swap with Castro, and are collecting up to $750 from families of still-imprisoned men, Donovan reported here yesterday.

"No group or individual is authorized to solicit any funds in my name," Donovan said, emphasizing that he accepts no money for any of his efforts to spring political victims of Cuba's Red regime.

The lawyer cited one case in which a woman and two confederates collected money from "scores of people" for steamship tickets from Havana to Miami. The scheme is completely phony, Donovan said.
